Defense Secretary Denounces Attack

By Edwin Q. White
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird denounced Friday the latest rocket assault on Saigon and warned: "If these attacks continue unabated, an appropriate response will be made."

The man whose report may decide any retaliatory action that President Nixon orders arrived in Saigon about 18 hours after a rocket barrage on the capital killed 15 civilians and wounded more than 70.

Saying that he had studied dispatches about the rocket attack while he flew across the Pacific, Laird declared: "Such indiscriminate assaults against the civilian population are in my view as secretary of defense an ominous violation of the understanding between us and North Vietnam."

He referred to what the United States regards as an understanding that North Vietnam would stop shelling South Vietnamese cities in exchange for a halt to the bombing of the North Nov. 1. Hanoi denies there is any such understanding.

CONSEQUENCES

If the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces continue attacks on South Vietnamese cities "they must be prepared to accept the consequences," Laird told reporters, adding: "We will not tolerate any enemy escalation of the war."

Echoing Nixon's words at a Tuesday news conference, Laird said "several options are available" for a response to the attacks on cities and if necessary "proper options will be used."

But he refused to indicate what the response might be when reporters asked him if a resumption of the bombing of North Vietnam is under consideration. Nixon has indicated any decision he makes will be based on Laird's report after his week-long visit to South Vietnam.

Informal sources said the U.S. Air Force and Navy have a number of plans ready and can resume the bombing in less than 24 hours if Nixon orders it.

PATIENCE NOT WEAKNESS

"We want to make it clear," Laird said, "that no one should mistake our patience and forbearance for a sign of weakness."

In seeking a reason for the strike against South Vietnamese cities, Laird remarked: "It may very well be that the enemy is attempting through their rocket attacks on major population centers to force a suspension of the talks in Paris."

Laird also expressed concern over the sharp rise in U.S. casualties in the first week of the enemy's spring offensive.

The U.S. Command said 453 Americans were killed last week and 2,593 wounded, the heaviest battle toll since the enemy's offensive last May.

Laird said one purpose of his visit to South Vietnam was to study what additional measures may be taken "to shift increasing combat responsibility from the United States to South Vietnam."

Perspective

Wrong Word

By Glen Willardson

A lot of people are getting upset about the appearance of off-camera pictures and photographs of indecent people in various college campus papers.

It seems like what has crept in to motion pictures—and by that I mean news and vulgar language—is beginning to tempt journalists. That's a sad thing.

The reasoning that writers use for their free use of words is that it means of artistic expression, just like the painter who picks his topics will to express a certain feeling.

When the motion pictures began to get artistic, obscenity charges were filed but the courts ruled in favor of the motion pictures "for art sake."

ARTISTIC WRITERS

Now some journalists are getting "artistic" in their writing and public is reacting with scorn.

The courts (Roth v. U.S. 1961) defended freedom of the press with definition of obscenity that makes mutual choice, to the average person, makes a predominant appeal to the prurient interests "taken as a whole," which goes substantially beyond the customary I of propriety and good taste, which is "utterly without redeeming social importance..."

It may be that in motion pictures a word will be spoken that make exercise self-censorship by voluntarily refusing the statement or word. Here the word is fleeting and leaves only a slight impression on audience.

In newspapers, however, a word that is printed becomes a permanent fixture and remains as a permanent record. For this reason the journalist must develop a code of ethics suited to the best interests of his public.

LEAVE IT OUT

Obscenity has no place in newspapers.

It's refreshing to know that at BYU vulgar language is not a common thing. It is a courteous person who refrains from using off-words—and this principle of courtesy is well exercised on this campus.

Recently at Annapolis, Md., a campus publication was put on trial for obscenity. The college president met with some of the state senator representatives on the issue.

The "Washington Post" carried the story and mentioned that president tried to defend the campus editors for freedom of expression. But the president failed to free the legislators of a lingering suspicion that weren't what they used to be, and perhaps should be investigated.

What had scandalized the legislators was a literary magazine published on campus that contained ten photos of two nude dancers, a man and woman.

The previous week the campus newspaper (same campus), quoted remarks of a speaker at a student press convention in Washington used four-letter words to describe the condition of the Nation.

Defending his own position, the university president said, "We were impressed on you that this is a very difficult area. A Communist map was suppressed... (here)... years ago. Today it would be considered rather mild."

CREDIT BYU

One senator commented on the issue, saying, "The filthy minds taken over the colleges. Would good schools like Brigham Young or Dame allow this sort of thing?"

It wouldn't happen here—that's for sure.

Meanwhile, the dissident student editors who continue to fight for "freedom," are in danger of losing their right of expression altogether.

Recently at Delta Delta Chi conference, which is a national journalism fraternity, freedom of the four-letter word was defended by certain group of editors. "The public should be educated the changing times have lifted taboos on certain words," was the argument of one student.

But the fact of the matter is, should journalism be employed to the fight of the minority who want to change the time?

I think not.

The Stock Answer

By Jerry Garrett

Responding to a call from my old friend, Helmut Gruber, I immediately rushed to his apartment to see what he wanted.

When I arrived, Helmut was standing at the door, waiting for me. "I've been waiting for you," he informed me.

"Oh, really?" I said, sounding a little like I had repeated myself. "What was it you wanted, Groob?" I queried.

"I have a story I thought you might like to hear," was the reply.

Being one of those persons that is easily amused, I was eager to hear the tale. We went inside and sat down. Helmut then proceeded to read the story to me.

"It was a warm day in the early spring," he began, "and all the animals on Farmer Schlunkmeyer's farm were standing around chatting. The horse and the duck were quietly conversing about something while the other animals meandered around not doing too much at all."

"Fragments of the conversation between the horse and the duck drifted lightly across the barnyard. The horse was talking now, "... yes, and I found a piece of glass in my hay the other day!" he revealed. "I'm sure Farmer Schlunkmeyer knew nothing about it. You know, ever since he changed hay dealers, I've been finding nails and glass and things like that in my meals quite frequently."

"The duck was sympathetic, 'I think we should tell the farmer about your hay. I'm sure he doesn't want something like that to hurt you. After all, he doesn't eat the hay so how would he know anything was wrong?'"

"Exactly," stated the horse objectively, "the farmer has been good to us. We should tell him if there is something wrong and I'm sure he'd be glad to take care of it. He has plenty of other things on his mind and sometimes he just doesn't notice some of the little things that need attention."

"It's agreed then," resolved the duck. "The next time we see the farmer, we'll just mention a few things to him. Sort of a farm report."

"Just then, Henry the chicken, rushed on the scene, squawking, 'If you don't like it you can leave. If you don't like it you can leave...'"

It was obvious that the little fowl had only caught snatches of the conversation the horse and the duck were having. However, he had seen it his duty to comment. The horse tried to calm the chicken, "Henry, you don't understand what we were talking about. We were only talking about some things around the farm that the farmer needs to know."

"However, nothing seemed to placate Henry. Even the duck tried, 'Look, Henry, leaving only what he wouldn't solve anything. Anyone else that came to the farm would inherit the same problems we left.'"

"Henry just wouldn't listen. So in the interests of barnyard harmony, they dropped the issue. Soon after that the cow got tired of stepping on the old barb wire lying around in his pasture, so he broke down the fence and went grazing in the pasture next to his."

Looking like a swimmer in the boundless sea of space, he took his first out the hatch of the 9's spidery lunar module (LM) at 12:03 p.m. EST for a 20-minute picture-taking session before floating in "golden slipper" foot restraints outside the LM's hatch. The 33-year-old civilian astronaut was kept alive by an oxygen-filled backpack and sustained by a 25-foot-long safety line kept taut by Schweickart's seat in the LM, Air Force Col. A. A. McDivitt.

Student Loses Fingers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A freshman lost three fingers when a home-made time bomb exploded as he attempted to put it in a locker room at strife-torn San Francisco State College, police said. Two unexploded, more powerful bombs were found nearby.

Moments after the blast in the creative arts building Wednesday

"When an atheist or a communist dies, he's really dead." These were the words of Fred Becker, producer-director at KBYU-TV, as he addressed the American Study Association Wednesday night.

"Which Way America" was the theme as Mr. Becker discussed the past, present and future of liberal and conservative elements that exist in America today.

He expressed the belief that present day liberal thought is descended from an atheistic point of view. "When Karl Marx set out to dethrone God, the only God he knew was a matterless, spirit God," Becker said.

"But," he said, "people like Marx threw out the baby with the bath," or all of Christianity with Catholicism. Without any type of God, "They turned to the next best thing, man."

Soccer Meet Planned

By Jim Hunt
Universe Sports Writer

The Utah College Soccer League will hold its winter meeting Monday in Ogden, president Bill Mead announced Wednesday.

The meeting, which has been postponed until the last minute, will be used to plan the league's spring schedule. Play should start in about two weeks.

BYU club officers had been discouraged with the progress of the league because the conference was put off for so long. But now they are optimistic that the league is back on the right foot.

"Once this meeting is out of the way, things are really going to start to move for us," commented Horst Mastag, club president. "We've been ready to go for weeks. All we need is to know our league schedule."

Mastag referred to finalization of out-of-league commitments. He has been in contact recently with a Nevada league that is anxious to have its all-star team meet the undefeated Cougar "A" team.

Meanwhile, practice can begin in earnest for the players who have kept in shape with indoor games. The only readjustment problems they anticipate are getting used to the larger outdoor field and the large goals they'll have to shoot at and defend.

But, inasmuch as they play nine months on the big field compared to three indoors, the adjustment should be minor.

and then come back to claw the Cowboys, that the game should be a lot closer than the students of either school care to admit.

For one thing the Cougars have shown tremendous potential during the course of the season since losing to the Aggies, 83-65 three months ago.

Secondly, NMSU playmaker
Charley Criss is ineligible for NCAA post-season play. That leaves the Aggies with five first team players but virtually no bench.

In the first game it took the Cougars so long to get untracked that the Aggies already had a huge lead and coasted to victory.

Tomorrow's rematch should be much more even. Henson knows this and will try to convince his players.

The turning point could be Aggie foul trouble which would greatly shift the game in favor of BYU.

Wyoming Cowpokes Join NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Four more teams, including high scoring Wyoming, were added Thursday to the lineup for the National Invitation Basketball Tournament in Madison Square Garden, March 13-22.

In addition to the Cowboys, who averaged 83 points a game this season, the latest entries include Tulsa, Ohio University and St. Peter's of Jersey City, N.J.

Wyoming has a 19-8 record. Tulsa is 19-7, Ohio U. 16-8 and St. Peter's, 20-6. The leading scorers for each team are Bobby "Bingo" Smith, averaging 25 points a game for Tulsa; Eluardo Webster, 23 points for St. Peter's; Carl Ashley, 21 for Wyoming and Gerry McKee, 19 for Ohio. Webster scored 51 points in an NIT game against Marshall last year.

The new entries increased to 10 the number in the NIT field so far. Six more remain to be chosen. Previously selected were Boston College, Rutgers, Temple, West Texas State, Tennessee and Southern Illinois, the 1968 winner.

TO BREAK RECORD

Pete Maravich, the Louisiana State star, needs 49 points in his final game Saturday night to break the major-college basketball season scoring record he set last year.

This was disclosed Thursday with the release of the latest statistics by the National Collegiate Sports Service through games of last Saturday.

Maravich's average was 43.1. He hiked it to 43.6 with a 55-point performance against Mississippi State the past Monday. A 49-point output against Georgia this Saturday night would give him a 43.81 mark. The record he established in the 1967-68 season is being carried as 43.8, but is actually 43.77.

Rick Mount of Purdue is the runnerup in the scoring race with a 33-point average. His is followed by Cal Murphy of Niagara with 32.7 and Spencer Haywood of Detroit, 31.8.

UCLA's Lew Alcindor is the field goal percentage leader with .639 while Jody Finney of Ohio State is tops in free throw percentage with .920 and Haywood is No. 1 in rebounds with a 21.5 mark.

Purdue leads in team offense with 93.7 points a game and Army in defense with an average yield of only 53.3 points.

Bowling Team Vs. Boise St.

The BYU bowling team faces its most critical match of the season when it meets Boise State University on their lanes Friday.

The Cougars, now in first place in the Intermountain Bowling Conference, must beat the second place Broncos to stay atop the league.

"It is a must win," states Shafter Brown, adviser to the team. In the men's division, the Y is led by Finn Christensen, who sports a 187 average and by Bev Empey, whose 172 average leads the women's division.

The kogers should be running away with the conference title, but the loss of David Musk, who had a 192 average, and Sue Andrus who rolled at 153, definitely hurts.

Future dates for the Cats include matches with Idaho State and Ricks on April 28-29.

Society's Child Coping With Undress Standards

Susan Tanner
Culture Editor

Upon a time, not too long ago the little village of BYU had a dress standard.

This was a very dressy dress, it was provided a modest and for dresses with hemlines on or below the knee.

Recently the little standard of decay. The town didn't enforce their belief and it is rumored that the Mayor wanted to change.

The girls began wearing slacks (Rumor has it that slacks wear didn't even last wasn't even of the sort to wear on a date.)

Under the watchful eye of the Mayor these "fine" (and question the term) young ladies became more numerous. Soon it became evident that this was the new "in" trend and more individuals fell prey to the misconception.

As the town grew, so did the number of girls who betrayed the "decent look" belief and began to wear clothes which most people would be embarrassed to paint their home in.

It was believed that these new styles were the latest thing in Paris or other fashion centers of the world, but that idea was considered absurd by the intellectuals.

"If you've got a dress standard, you ought to abide by it or you don't, you should throw it out," noted one well-dressed young lady.

Now this was the dilemma which faced the little village. Could they in all honesty continue on their chosen path and mislead the terms of the standard or would they throw out the standard and let every individual make up his own—a program which would make BYU like any other town?

"Hear, hear—let us decide for ourselves, don't oppress us," came the cry from one of the radical elements in town.

"No. We should have basic guidelines to follow," added the opposing view.

They bickered and yelled, fighting it out until the issue was so confused that no one knew the answer and no one really knew what the standard was anymore—and still no word from the Mayor or his helpers.

The town was floundering in darkness and no light came. Would the girls be permitted to continue their line of dress or would the standard be enforced? No one knew for sure.

Questions were asked and still no word came. It seemed as if the town would drown in the controversy. Girls wore sloppy raggy blue jeans and filthy faded Army cut-offs.

And this wasn't just around the campus, it was in class, in the library and other buildings abiding by the standard. Many people said, "Oh, no." Others, "I wish." But the problem remains and no one will take the responsibility.

Scouts Plan Invasion

Fifteen hundred young men plan to take over part of the BYU campus tomorrow, and for the following Saturdays as well.

Campus dissent at BYU?
Hardly. These young men are all Boy Scouts from central and southern Utah who are involved in the twelfth annual Merit Badge Powwow.

Held in cooperation with the Utah National Parks Council, Boy Scouts of America, the Powwow gives scouts of second-class rank or higher instruction and an opportunity to earn up to three merit badges.

Forty-six merit badge fields will be taught by 140 BYU professors, teachers and qualified students. Scouts will also hear from several prominent guest speakers in morning assemblies.

The Youth Leadership Dept.,

Special Courses and Conferences and Alpha Phi Omega are coordinating the program.

Classes for the boys include sports, animal industry, sciences, communications, health, speech, horsemanship and many others to provide for a wide range of interests.

While the scouts will technically complete their merit badge requirements in their local districts, the facilities at BYU provide the boys an opportunity to meet requirements that would be difficult to complete in their home areas.

Newly married women drive slower than married men because women will do anything to stay under 30.—Bert Boyack, Davis County (Utah) Clipper.

Model U.N. Campaigns

By Peter Feierabend
Universe Feature Writer

Two weeks ago five students of international relations, members of the Model United Nations club on campus, went to St. Louis, Mo. for the Midwest Model United Nations.

Doug Brunette, chairman of the BYU delegation, described the Model U.N. as "an exercise in role playing." He sat on the Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee which discussed apartheid policy in South Africa and the sea bed question (control of the ocean floor).

Each university is selected to represent one country by the Secretariat. BYU drew Canada, an important position because of its seat on the Security Council and its close ties to the United States.

Mike Noonchester, chairman of the club, was on the Trusteeship Committee which debated problems in Namibia and Southern Rhodesia. He calls the Model U.N. a "behind the doors...life experience" in understanding the problems of foreign countries.

The Special Political Committee debated Vietnam and Palestine. As delegate to this committee, Shirley Wilson had to represent Canada in its function as an ally to the United States. Due to its involvement in Southeast Asia, the US must be represented by Canada in debate on the Vietnam question.

One week after the April 17 national meeting the club will sponsor an Intermountain Model U.N. at BYU.

Indicative of the reputation BYU earned for itself at St. Louis is the letter which Larry Davis, Secretary-General of the Midwest Model U.N. recently sent President Wilkinson:

Dear Mr. Wilkinson:

We would like to commend your students for the contribution they made to the conference both in formal debate and in caucuses. The conference encompassed over 85 different colleges and universities from over 19 states and Canada. We were pleased to have Brigham Young University represented.

Also, your school will receive primary consideration when making national assignments according to preferences listed on the pre-registration form for the 1970 Midwest Model United Nations because of your superior delegation this year.
